Background

As part of this initiative, a 100-bed hospital was established under a public-private partnership with the Government of Andhra Pradesh's Aarogyasri Scheme. [2] This significant milestone stands as a shining example within the G20 Health Summit series, demonstrating the immense potential of affordable and accessible healthcare. The endeavour serves as a testament to the dedicated efforts aimed at addressing the prevalent healthcare disparities in rural areas and small towns. Breaking away from the traditional notion that quality healthcare is limited to metropolitan cities, this initiative boldly showcases the possibility of delivering affordable and accessible healthcare to all, irrespective of geographical constraints. [3]
